Login Instructions

Introduction

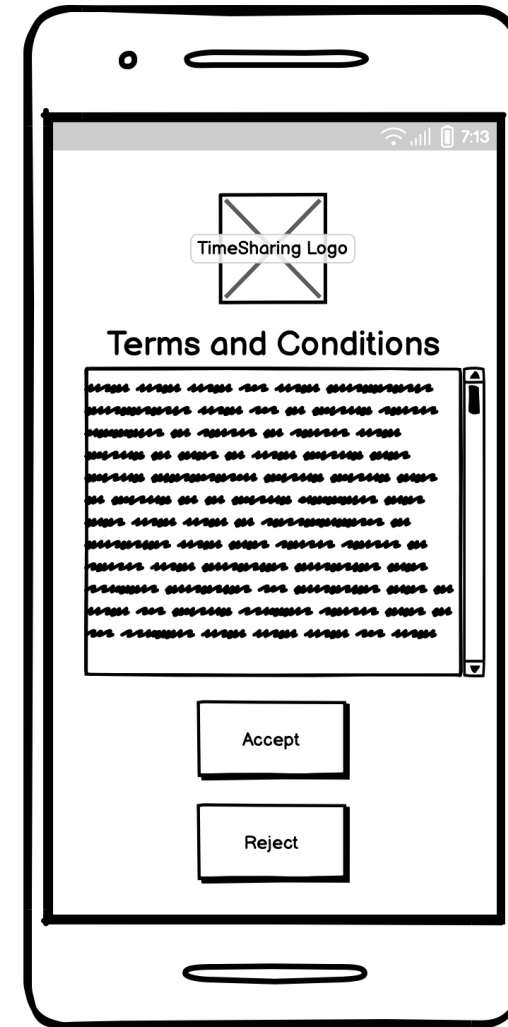

I worked on this piece to follow an ISO-standard model of documentation that goes screen by screen. In my current position, I created a similar document as a prototype for restructuring our user guides. While we had to abandon the restructuring project, my teammates thought the prototype had merit.

My current company is a federal contractor, and our user materials are not public-facing documents. This document uses an app concept idea called Timesharing. I've built mockups of each screen, which are used in place of images.
